Vol. XIX 2011 N. 1 addresses digital communication, new languages and technologies, and evangelization through these venues. Specifically, how can we work with new means of communication, and how do we react to some of its potential downfalls, such as alienation, loss of identity, and diminution of personal interaction? Given our present-day secular society and advancing technologies, we ought to revitalize traditional approaches to theological discussion by modernizing both language and means of communication.
