This major international conference will explore the tensions between the religious and secular world views in today's globalised society. Covering key international issues such as minority rights, religious freedom and religious perspectives on freedom of expression, the conference will draw on examples from India, North Africa, Turkey, United Kingdom, France and North America.

“ The dialogue between the complementary secular and religious intellectual traditions today is vital for all our societies. This conference aims to bring a necessary and illuminating global perspective to an analysis of key contemporary questions. ”
